

Dyslexia Support Network

Aim

The Dyslexia Support Network is a collaborative project between St. Mary's, Roehampton and Kingston universities which was set up to provide a local forum for school and college staff to share their experiences and consider ways of facilitating students' transition into HE.

The forum provides a time and place for all staff who are interested and involved with dyslexia support to share good practice and offer support to one another.

What is involved?

Members meet 3 times a year and identify topics for discussion on current issues, such as policy changes working with specific groups of students, and the Disabled Student Allowance. Participating institutions take it in turn to host the meetings and invite a guest speaker to present in an area of interest, such as English as an Additional Language, speech development and assessment issues. For further information on the DSN (Dyslexia Support Network) contact: Suzanne Marchment, Special Projects, Aimhigher London South, s.marchment@kingston.ac.uk

The Dyslexia Support Network also organises the Annual Year 12 HEI conference